

Personal income tax return

The personal income tax return has to be completed annually by everyone subject to Belgian income tax. It can be submitted as a paper form or electronically via Tax-on-web. The deadline for the return is 15th July 2023, except for returns reporting income from a self-employed activity (profits, gains and/or remuneration of managers or co-working spouses) and foreign professional income, for which the deadline is 18th October 2023. This is a transitional arrangement, however. Different dates will apply from the tax year 2024.

Return

It'll soon be that time of year when the brown envelop comes through the letterbox again and you can submit your personal income tax return via Tax-on-web. However, it's becoming increasingly difficult to find your way through the labyrinthine tax system alone and it is not without risk. The tax administration is, for example, already aware of a number of financial details. These details are automatically completed in Tax-on-web beforehand. The information is not always correct, however, and should always be checked.

A number of details are often absent that can weigh heavily in the final demand if they are not included in the return. It is possible to relieve your employees of those annual frustrations by offering them the assistance of your tax consultant. The help of a fiscal expert means that their return will not only be correct, but beneficial for them.

An expert will, for example:

- see deductible items and/or tax relief that the employee might overlook
- report mortgages and home loans correctly in the return
- calculate the final amount to be paid or the rebate to be received
- know all the exceptions.

This service offers a very high degree of employee satisfaction: on the one hand, you save your employees the administrative stress and, on the other, you offer them the guarantee that the tax return will be completed correctly and in the most tax efficient way.
