

SUSTAINABLE BUSINESS

GETTING STARTED!

When the CSRD (Corporate Sustainability Reporting Directive) comes into force, companies will be legally required to report sustainability information. Exactly who is required to report will depend on specifics such as the company size. However, even companies that do not fall under the scope of the CSRD will feel under pressure to follow a similar strategy. A

CSRD programme has several benefits besides its direct impact and compliance:

- Alignment of corporate strategy to future risks and opportunities
- Gathering insights into stakeholder expectations
- Growing trust from business partners
- Securing access to capital, subsidies and investments
- Establishing a stronger reputation on the labour market
- Avoidance of greenwashing

WHICH COMPANIES ARE REQUIRED TO SUBMIT REPORTS?

OUR SERVICES

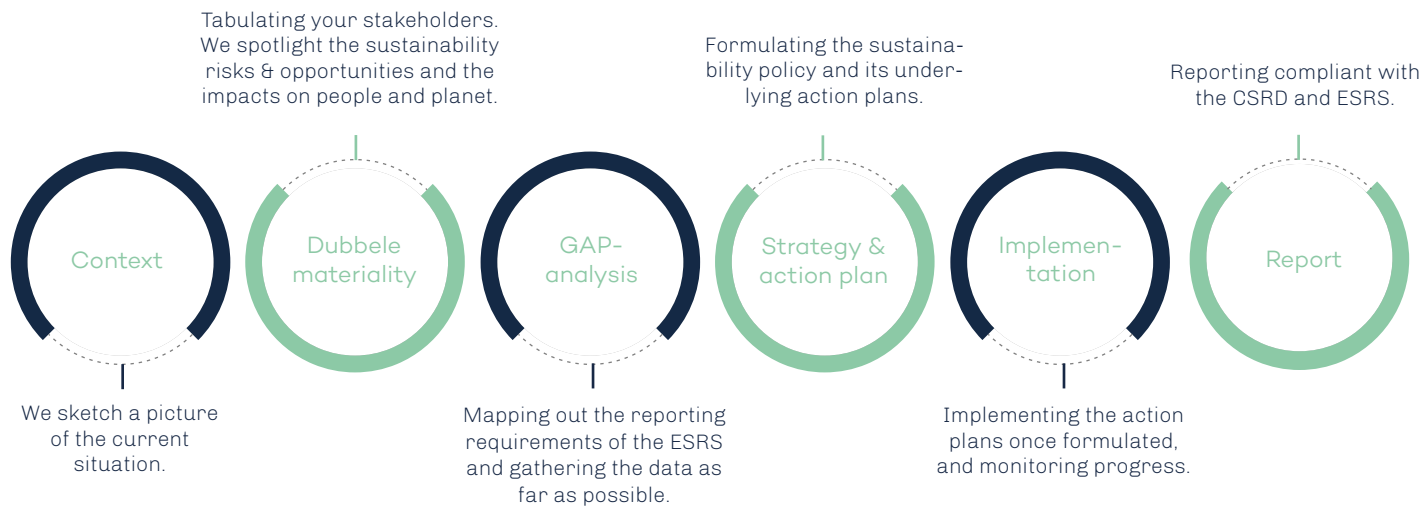

Information & support

- Information/training sessions setting out the general context for ESG and sustainability.
- Support with development of your sustainability strategy and reporting system complying with the requirements of the CSRD and underlying ESRS (European Sustainability Reporting Standards). For this, we draw on the expertise within our company, and also work with partners for specific topics such as calculating your greenhouse gas emissions or establishing a transparent tracking system.

Audit & assurance

- Internal audit or readiness check regarding ESG and sustainability. We carry out an internal audit and deliver an expert opinion on your sustainability processes and reporting activities. This enables us to issue an evaluation of your programme and the effectiveness of your sustainability process and reporting activities.
- Assurance for sustainability reporting: our company auditors will be happy to review your sustainability report.
